REQUIREMENTS CONSUMPTION REVIEW (RCR)

For the initial build of Goods or servicing of Goods, Seller agrees to participate in Buyer's cross-functional Requirements Consumption Review (RCR) to ensure Seller's comprehension of Purchase Contract, engineering, and technical requirements and that the requirements are incorporated into the supplier's manufacturing planning, service planning, and related processes.

Buyer will communicate and coordinate with Seller to schedule the RCR as an early involvement activity, at a mutually agreed upon time, intended to be performed prior to start of manufacturing and/or servicing of goods.

Seller shall make records of contract requirements review, production planning, training and any other applicable records readily available at time of RCR. Buyer reserves the right to review Seller's flow-down of contract and engineering requirements to Seller's subcontractor(s).

If Seller has previously completed an RCR for the same Goods or service of Goods, a new RCR will not be required for this Purchase Contract.
